

KAMPFGRUPPE TETTAU

(INFANTRY COMPANY)

LTG Tettau was thrust into command of a polyglot force of largely inexperienced forces with the mission of attacking and destroying one of the most elite units in the British army. Short of all the requirements to launch effective operations the troops under Tettau pushed back the British into the Oosterbeek perimeter. Tremendous casualties were incurred but the British were defeated. This force, described as being indifferently led, even conducted a river crossing of their own, crossing over to the south bank of the Rhine late in the battle.
